New bushland park for Peregian Springs

A new one-hectare bushland park unveiled in the FKP Property Group's $700 million Peregian Springs masterplanned community will cater for runners to readers and everyone in between.

Three quarters of the park, which cost $500,000 to develop, is pristine native bushland, will provide another social hub for Peregian Springs' residents.

A 70-metre elevated observation boardwalk has been integrated within the tranquil setting, allowing residents and visitors to enjoy the lush canopy of surrounding vegetation.

To provide residents with the greatest opportunity to utilise the park, FKP has incorporated landscaping, outdoor furniture and fitness equipment, ensuring the open space is complements the master-planned village's existing communal amenities.

FKP's Executive General Manager Land, Mr Bryan Jackson, said well-equipped communal green spaces had become hallmarks of the national developer's communities.

"One of the outstanding features of Peregian Springs is the open vistas created by the natural parklands and conservation areas and featuring the golf course," Mr Jackson said.

"In all our masterplanned communities, we set out to ensure residents have the space to rest and play in the way they enjoy most."

Through the eight-year history of Peregian Springs, FKP has placed as much focus on building the community's social fabric as its physical infrastructure.

FKP has created homes for thousands of Australians as part of a portfolio of land and property developments valued at $5 billion.
